Dawn E. Scalici joins Global Data Risk

Global Data Risk LLC (GDR), a leading consulting firm serving clients around the world, announces that Dawn Scalici, a 33-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency, with additional service with McKinsey & Company and Thomson Reuters, has joined GDR as a Director. Dawn has decades of experience in delivering intelligence-driven strategic advice and conceptualizing business solutions to address complex risk issues. She brings to bear her extensive experience in strategic intelligence, program development, risk management, and due diligence to support GDR's clients.

Dawn served as a Senior Executive at the CIA, and was recognized for her innovative leadership of intelligence analysis and for advancing the counterterrorism, homeland security, and transnational organized crime missions. A talented collaborator and communicator, she also represented CIA in multiple senior interagency assignments—including at the Department of State, White House, and Department of Homeland Security—where she operated successfully at the intersection of intelligence and policy. In her last federal assignment, Dawn served as the National Intelligence Manager for the Western Hemisphere, reporting directly to the Director of National Intelligence. She was responsible for managing and overseeing national intelligence for a region spanning the Arctic to South America. In recognition of her contribution to national security, Dawn was awarded the CIA Distinguished Career Intelligence Medal and the National Intelligence Distinguished Service Medal.

Upon her retirement from the CIA, Dawn served as the Government Global Business Director for Thomson Reuters—a position she established to enable the company to optimally leverage its vast and unique data, products, and services to meet the needs of government clients. Dawn most recently served as the Director of Diligence for McKinsey & Company, where she established the firm's global due diligence program, designed to identify and help mitigate legal, regulatory, reputational, or geopolitical risks associated with firm clients and other counterparties. In doing so, she led a global team of analysts, spurred innovation in analytic approaches and technology adoption, and played a key role in addressing and resolving complex risk issues globally for the firm.
